To R. B. Hayes—Confidential.

After all, it appears that you are more to be pitied than blamed, to be regarded more in sorrow than in anger. While your party, for purposes of its own, has held your body up as a shield between itself and the people, who have said they do not want either yourself or your party, you have been losing the noblest offer of immortal fame and affection that history has proffered any American since the days when George Washington waived his chances of undue political position. We do not say that your circumstances and Washington's are precisely similar, nor ever analogous, but merely you might have been awarded credit in history for a similar disposition to resign power to the people, to whom it belongs of right. To you, personally, it must necessarily be a small achievement to have been listed in future annals as one of a long line of Presidents, a mere item in a catalogue of chronological facts; to have your name named by school boys together with that of Martin Van Buren, James K. Polk, Franklin Pierce, and the interminable line to be stretched out to the crack of doom, like those sovereigns that Maebeth pass by. We do not intend to disparage those gentlemen nor any President we have had, or may hereafter have; but there are in our national history other names more illustrious than theirs, though their happy possessors never achieved the Presidency—even the names of their defeated competitors. The name of John Quincy Adams is more likely to be remembered from his brilliant record in the halls of Congress than from the fact that he was a chronological item in the White House. The name of Henry Clay, who "would rather be right than President," is at least as bright and enduring as that of Polk; and that of Winfield Scott will last as long as Pierce's. It may be true that you had not the shining record of Adams or Clay in debate, nor the eminent fame of Winfield Scott in the field; neither one nor the other to rescue you from impending oblivion. But fortune has tendered you an opening for an action more glorious and immortal than any of theirs. It was not so much what Cincinnati did as what he did not that made him great. And so it was with Washington and so it might have been with you. You have been named as the leader of your party and the purer portion of that party have declared you a man to lead in fact, and not to be led by its baser elements. You had but to assert your leadership, and to say to those baser elements that you could not countenance the devious and subversive means by which they propose to defeat popular sovereignty and bring it into ridicule, by utilizing Returning Boards in one State and rejecting them in another. The conspirators might not have obeyed you, as they are unaccustomed to obey; but the whole mass of the American people would have risen to sustain you. For you to have done this would not have required even an exertion of magnanimity; for not only would it have elevated your name into one of the noblest landmarks in history, even in other ages and other climes, but if you craved the Presidency, there is not envy enough in this land to have prevented your being lifted into that office by the feeblest party four years from now.

It is probably too late; the rubicon has, perhaps, been passed, and you must take your stand rather with those who have sought power by indirection than with the nobler class who have clad themselves in immortality by renouncing it.

Surely it is unhappy that a man of honorable ambition, who has had this tide offered him in his affairs, should have chosen to be catalogued and classified with the schemers and plotters who are whispering to each other what Elisha thundered to those other gamblers: "Lose not a single trick."

You have preferred to take your stand, not with Washington and Cincinnati, but with Packard and Chamberlain and the negro saloon-keeper of New Orleans.

An intemperate printer is now spoken of as a typographical error.

Do you take The Sunny South?

If not, send for it immediately. It is the universal favorite, and all Southerners are proud of it. Let a large club be raised without delay in this community. It is the only illustrated literary weekly in the South, and the press and people everywhere unite in pronouncing it the equal in every respect of any similar publication in America. The best literary talent of the whole country, North and South is writing for it, and it has something each week for all classes of readers. Its stories are superior in literary merit, and equal in thrilling interest, to those of any other paper, and its essays upon all subjects are from the best minds of the age.

In addition to thrilling new stories, a series of brilliant articles will soon begin on the CAMPAIGNS AND BATTLES OF THE ARMY OF TENNESSEE, by COL. L. B. W. FROBELL, a distinguished military engineer of that army in all its trying times. These papers will explain all the movements of Generals Johnston Hood and Sherman. Don't miss any of the numbers. They will read like a fascinating romance.

New and exciting stories are beginning every week or two.

State and local agents are being appointed everywhere, but let each community form a club at once and send on for the paper. Having passed successfully through two of the hardest years we shall ever see, it now challenges the admiration and unlimited support of the people. The price is $3 a year, but clubs of four and upwards get it for $2.50. Address Jno H. SEALS, Atlanta, Ga.

We club it with the HARTFORD HERALD, and for $4.00 you can secure your home paper and our great Southern literary journal, both of which everybody in this community should sustain.
